

Volunteers.

The group had embraced this play with enthusiasm. The timing and pace of all the acting was of a piece and well judged. There was a good standard of acting and commitment all round. Each principal had thought about their character and how they would present themselves, and all the shoppers were excellent and natural, giving authentic background to the main action.

Ensemble

The whole company worked so well and with such evident and generous enjoyment together that I want to credit them with exemplary ensemble work.

Production

The whole show was lively, entertaining and not without it's moments of pathos. All elements of the production dovetailed seamlessly together to support the production vision. The directorial team of Kathy Jiggins and first-time director Victoria Weavers led the team with assurance and a lightness of touch which resulted in a joyful show. Well done.

Summary

We came away delighted with our visit to Little Waltham, admiring the many strengths of this group and looking forward to our next visit. Thank you.
